The starting point in this project was to explore the various ways of constructing with wood.

This led me to a very common piece of furniture, namely the stool.

The design is inspired by something I'd like to call cabin aesthetics, which contains solid, reliable furniture, oiled pine and warmth.

To fit in a modern home, the stool is foldable and can easily be stuffed away when it's not being used. This function does not affect the robustness of the traditional cabin furniture.

Materials: Pine wood and steel.
